I am writing to voice my strong opposition to the Landscape Vegetation Analysis project.

I feel that the scale and scope of this project is simply much too large at 360,000 acres in the Snowy Range and Sierra Madre that would be made available for logging, thinning, and other vegetation treatments, 260,000 acres available for commercial timber harvest, 95,000 acres available for clear cut logging, 165,000 acres available for commercial thinning and selective logging, and up to 600 miles of temporary roads constructed.

I do not believe any commercial logging should be allowed in inventoried roadless areas, no commercial logging or temporary roads should be allowed in the Sheep Mountain National Game Refuge, including the area southwest of the Fox Creek Road, and no more than 25 miles of new temporary roads should be open at any given time.

As a Wyoming taxpayer and longtime resident, I further believe the Forest Service owes it to Wyoming residents to furnish the following information: proposed road locations must be provided with analysis of environmental impacts, the Forest Service should provide a full analysis of climate change impacts of the proposed action, and the Forest Service should provide a full economic analysis of the plan, including how much the proposed action will cost and where the resources will come from to implement it. After all, this is our land too and we have an interest in it.
